

NOT THE HALF HAS BEEN TOLD.

During our recent immense sales ladies said to us they had no idea that we were making such sacrifices on goods. They were surprised to find our entire stock marked at such low figures. We can not tell the half of what we are going to show this week, but invite every lady in St. Louis to come and see. We think we can surprise them. If there are any ladies in the city—and we think there can be few—who have never been in our store, they will hardly believe their own eyes when they see the

GRAND STOCK OF NEW AND DESIRABLE GOODS!

And the VERY REASONABLE FIGURES we sell them at. The recently demoralized state of the market enabled us to secure our new stock at figures that are about on a par with the low prices secured for our great sales. The corner has been turned and prices are going up, but we will give our customers the benefit of our successful purchases. Such opportunities to secure bargains occur so seldom that the prudent should now embrace the present one.

THE HOUSE.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 18.—Mr. McRae, the new member from Platte, elected to succeed Mr. Adkins, deceased, caused considerable excitement in the House this morning by rising to a question of privilege about a personal grievance against a member of the Committee on Local Bills, which he addressed to Mr. Jackson, of St. Louis.

McRae was brought up to the bar of the House by the members of the St. Louis syndicate held a conference with Mr. Jackson, and the two men agreed to present the case to the House.

McRae was then called to the bar of the House and the two men agreed to present the case to the House.

TEN PAGES.

WEDESDAY, MARCH 18, 1885.

ANOTHER batch of nominations! The College week.THE "Heathen Chinese" could take lessons from the St. Louis House of Delegates.The publication of "the rival gas ordinances" was a slick trick, but the Post-Dispatch is on to it.READ the two gas ordinances. That is, don't read the bogus gas ordinance. Read the genuine ordinances which are now not before the House of Delegates, but before the Council.A LAME of the Afghan protectorate means a Japan, the Anglo-Indian Empire, and the working of this idea in the English mind is likely to produce a speedy lop of collapse of the Gladstone ministry.The allied monopolies' ordinance is the best for the city; it can afford to pass on its merits. We may remark, however, that it is opposed by an ordinance to furnish gas, not at $1.50, but at $1.30 per thousand feet.A BRITISH ultimatum sent to ARAJI Bay or to the Boers is not liable to "lapses." But circumstances after cases, and when the Russian bears quietly sit down on a warlike demand and asks Mr. GLADSTONE what he is going to do about it, the case is altogether different.No doubt the House of Delegates meant well in ordering the gas propositions to be printed in the Globe-Democrat and in the Republican, after they had appeared in the Post-Dispatch, but it was a needless expense. When anything appears in the Post-Dispatch it is read by everybody.The Civil Service Reform Association is after Mr. EUGENE HIGGINS with serious charges against his personal character and political record. The fact that Mr. HIGGINS is Senator GORMAN's man, and was made appointment clerk on his recommendation by Mr. MANNING, is rather calculated to make Civil Service Reform elevate her back and shoulder.KENTUCKY statesmanship is at a loss to account for the refusal of the President to appoint a Kentuckian as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and is inclined to believe that there must be a secret Randal alliance behind it. If the local Democracy in Kentucky and Missouri had elsewhere is going to be knocked silly over the failure of every office-seeker, its condition will be indeed.WHEN GLADSTONE, in answer to a Parliamentary inquiry, said that England's demand for the withdrawal of Russian armies from Afganistan had "lapsed," the word was received with ironical cheers. The cheers were ironical because the word was a transparent euphemism, through which the House of Commons plainly saw the British lion on the run with his tail between his legs.THE LATENT action of the Delaware Legislature in selecting Attorney-General GRAY to succeed BAYARD in the Senate disappoints all anticipations of a conflict between the BAYARDS and the SALSBURYS over a rupture of the compact dividing the State between the two families. Mr. GRAY is BAYARD's choice and supposed to be ready to surrender the Senatorship whenever BAYARD is ready to resume it.VICE-PRESIDENT HENDRICKS seems indisposed to play the role of a cipher in this Administration, while his friends sigh for pup. There is nothing the matter with his big toe, now, and they say that he does more walking and more talking in behalf of hungry friends than any other man in Washington. He does all his hobiling in the departments, jostling many people, and treading on many corns in the crowded corridors.WE understand that petitions are in circulation calling on the people of St. Louis to protest against the passage by the Council of the gas ordinance of the allied monopolies.
Such a petition ought to receive the signature of every consumer of gas in the Laclede Company's district, unless they wish to tax themselves twenty-five cents on every foot of gas they consume in order to prevent the St. Louis Company's victrium from getting relief, and in order to shut out competition forever.HUNTINGTON and STANFORD own a four-fifths interest in the Republican party of California, and a one-tenth interest (including Judge FIELD and the like) in the California Democracy. By working these two interests together, sometimes tandem, sometimes abreast, but always in monopoly harness, the railroad kings govern California with a rod of iron, over-ruling the will of her people, setting aside the decisions of her courts, and trampling her constitution and her tax laws in the dust. Yet the representatives of Huntington and Stanford's little Democratic body guard have turned up in Washington, demanding recognition as the representatives of the California Democracy.Having carried the State for BLAINE and elected STANFORD to the Senate in revenge for the revolts of the California Democracy against the dictation of monopoly's tools, they now demand control of the Federal patronage also.
The present Administration owes about as much to the Stephen Field Democracy of California as to the Cyrus Field Democracy of New York, if there is any such Democracy anywhere.

A SMALL TRICK.

The action of the House of Delegates in ordering the printing of the ordinances of the rival gas companies was a contemptible trick intended to deceive the people.Subscribers who fail to receive their paper

GIVING AWAY TOO MUCH.

It strikes us that the gentlemen of the House of Delegates who are working for the two old companies are proving too much against the Water Gas Company. If the latter could be so very liberal with bribes to obtain the poor privilege of laying a plant and offering gas at $1.80 to St. Louis, people will naturally conclude that the two old companies could have afford to pay a very large sum for the enactment resolving them into a monopoly combination with power to extort $1.75.

To give away such a franchise for nothing is to add twenty-five cents to the present cost of gas to consumers in the north half of the city, and to insure the combined companies against the decline in the price of gas, which is going oneverywhere but in St. Louis, is to display a liberality which municipal legislators are not inthe habit of exhibiting gratis to unpopular corporations wallowing in wealth and flauntingeighty per cent dividends in the faces of a robbed community.

How long these monopoly guarantees will be controlled by the pending bill, is a question about which all disputes are liable to be decided in favor of the monopoly. The experience of Paris, of London, of Chicago, and the legislative investigation in New York City all show that $1.75 is an extortionate price for gas, out of all proportion to the cost of producing and delivering it in a densely-built city like St. Louis, where candle and plant can be had so cheap. The rapid introduction of the electric light everywhere and the recent great developments of natural gas which can be delivered all over the country by pipe, indicate further great reductions in the price of gas in the near future and explain the anxiety of the St. Louis companies for a premature renewal of contracts with this city five years before the expiration of any existing contract.

Nothing can be lost by defeating the pending bill. If there were not a pipe nor a gas machine in St. Louis to-day she could get a better contract from a responsible new company within a week, and before 1890 both of the old companies will be glad to offer far more liberal terms.

BIRCHMORE has proposed and the Reichstag will probably pass a law taxing all sales of a speculative character—that is, all sales of stocks or goods not consumed by actual delivery, nor material, nor to be resold in good faith for actual delivery. Every merchant and broker will be required to keep a record and make a report of all his sales thus classified as speculative, and to pay thereon a tax of one mark for every 5,000 marks worth of goods or stocks so sold. No person is permitted to engage in a speculative transaction without a record to the tax collector, and his records are to be checked by the tax collector.

Washington "society people," so-called, will not be resold in good faith for

report of all his sales thus classified as specula-

CREMATION AND CHRISTIAN BURIAL.

Addresses Before the Nineteenth Century Club Last Night.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

Now York, March 18.—The Nineteenth Century Club took hold of the question of cremation last evening, and having listened to several hours of very vigorous talk, pro and con, from the cremationists and from the inhumationists, sipped its coffee, nipped its biscuits, ate a bit of salad and passed a verdict of "requsitum in pace" upon the subject. Rev. Dr. John D. Bengtson, the chaplain of the Navy Yard and the President of the United States Cremation Company, opened the discussion with a very long paper. The inhumationists took a stand, and the cremationists for the fashionable small-burials of the period, as the reverend gentleman took them with his on a word journey underground, through a popular cemetery. He rattled the bones and over the living, and then, when he had got enough in his subject besides to set his hearers laughing heartily, when he told them that the man who had been buried in the County milk was made in the early morning hours, was the pump water drawn from the sites of the old and abandoned burying grounds. He did not say George Washington, who was buried in a church in a half-acre burial plot, wherein, during less than three generations, were buried.

500,000 people were buried.

Kensal Green, the fashionable London cemetery, came in for a good deal of the speaker's attention, past and present, and the reason was, where there was space for 32,000 persons, and according to the calculations of the trustees, this was to be the largest cemetery in the world. The cemeteries of this great capital of the great Christian nation of Great Britain arranged for the burial of four thousand dead in a single year.

Grave of Christ is Christian burial," said the reverend speaker, with sarcasm and fine curl of the lip. He took up the subject of church burials, and told of the number of church-yards which had piled up their level seventeen feet with the grubbed down bones left by the church pews, and the ladies' pavements.

REPLIED TO THEIR SMELLING SISTER.

The reverend speaker, in his opinion, science and religious superstition, and the chaplain took for a victory by the former. Upon the question of the propriety of cremation, he said, "It is the present day, and brought out a laugh as he glibly said, "that the price of a cremation is no more than that of a burial in a plot." Professor Garfield's remains had been placed in a casket.

"Compare that waste of money with this," said he, and then, with a broad smile, "I have a corrugated bean-pot, but which he assured them was a genuine burial urn, with sketches from the life of the deceased."

Rev. Dr. Newland Maynard spoke earnestly for the sentiment which abhors earth burials and for a victory by the former. Upon the question of the propriety of cremation, he said, "It is the present day, and brought out a laugh as he glibly said, "that the price of a cremation is no more than that of a burial in a plot."
